Memo to Coal File:

RE: Reclamation of the Taylor Livestock Mine
ACT/019/016

On August 16, 1982 Susan Linner and myself met with Ferno Dubray.

Ferno Dubray had done the on-site work for the Taylor Livestock mine, a gold placer and gravel operation. However, he denied he was an agent, employee, independent contractor, subcontractor, or business invitee of the operator, Winestock Resources, Inc.

The letter authored by me and dated August 16, 1982 was thoroughly discussed. More detailed information regarding seeding methods and times was disseminated by Susan.

Mr. Dubray indicated that reclamation activities could not be undertaken until after September 1, 1982 when Mr. Dubray's assessment work was completed.

Mr. Dubray and the Division personnel agreed that all reclamation and revegetation on the disturbed area would be completed by September 30, 1982 unless Winecup Resources, Inc. petitioned for an extension manifesting good cause.

Mr. Dubray has a noted philosophical antagonism to the regulations. Therefore, all reclamation work should be done under direct observation by Division personnel.

A follow-up letter confirming the commitments made and specified time dead lines will be sent to the operator, counsel for the operator, and Mr. Dubray.
